

Search Warrant Development

More often than not, enough probable cause is available to get an officer inside of a residence, but the ability to put the information on paper and articulate the who, what, when, why, where and how is not conveyed properly.

Topics Covered:

- How to maximize your resources
- Search warrant templates
- Verbiage to get you in the door, with a small amount of information
- Intelligence gathering, sharing and dissemination
- How to find what you need on the internet
- How to write a complete search warrant
- Current case law
- The importance of de-confliction
- When to wait and when to go
- How to use their information, but alleviate identifying a CS was just at the residence.
- Practical hands-on, interactive
